

Southeastern, in conjunction with Dutchess & Ulster BOCES Presents: Library Media Literacies for Educators

These Information literacy and research proficiency workshops will introduce educators to a wide range of free teaching and learning resources for practical use in the 21st century classroom. The classes will be taught by college and school librarians to provide educators with a solid foundation for teaching research techniques that are necessary for their students' future.

These workshops will take place over three days. Attendees can come to one, two, or all three of the classes.

8/14/2017 Information Literacy:

Understanding effective search on Google and Wikipedia, website evaluation, copyright, plagiarism, citing sources, and how to incorporate Empire State Information Fluency Continuum and other standards in assignments that foster critical thinking.

8/15/2017 Research Proficiency:

What is expected in a current college research assignment, how to create good research questions, time management, achieving an understanding of how incorporate the library's catalog, databases, and lesser-known services into effective research. This class will be held at the Mount Saint Mary College Library in Newburgh, NY and will cover skills that you can apply to your own school's library and other academic libraries in the Hudson Valley.

8/16/2017 Archival Resources in the Hudson Valley:

Learn about the network of local primary sources, many of which are unique to our region. You will learn about how use archives and government resources in school projects and how to incorporate websites like Hudson River Valley Heritage into lesson plans.

The workshops will include ongoing work on an annotated bibliography of resources that attendees can use in support of an instructional unit or objective.
